FROM FROZEN SWEETS AND PET TREATS TO SPICED CHICKEN AND CAFFEINE OVERLOAD THE WOMEN HAVE IT AT KROG STREET MARKET

ATLANTA: Paces Properties is ready to unleash another round of new tenants who will be at the highly-anticipated Krog Street Market. Set to open this June, KSM will be home to some incredible female business owners and chefs. This group of amazing women comes to KSM with extraordinary talent and is raising the bar while keeping with KSM's vision of locally established relationships throughout the community.

"Our tenant mix is incredible and to have James Beard winners and nominees makes us so fortunate to have so many great women involved in this project. Behind the scenes our leasing agent Lily Heimburger of SRS Real Estate Partners has done a fantastic job as have our PR guru Tara Murphy, our Stove Works office leasing agent Max White, and our zoning attorney Sharon Gay," said Pat Wilson of Paces Properties. "There are also several other women owners and co-owners that we've announced previously, from Megan Ouzts at the Spotted Trotter to Xanic Dunning of Pannus Bakery, from Cindy Tarrant at French Market Florist to Jennifer Johnson of Fred's Meat & Bread and Yvonne Kahn of Gu's Dumplings. Without these women this project wouldn't be nearly as successful."

Feedback thus far for KSM has been very positive and supports Paces Properties' vision of a diverse, culinary-driven destination where the neighborhood and surrounding communities relate to the mix of restaurants, market stalls and retailers; making this a regular (if not daily) stop when it opens.

THE SPOTTED TROTTER TEAM EXPANDS WITH FIRST RESTAURANT AT KROG STREET MARKET

ATLANTA: Today Paces Properties announced that Chef Kevin Ouzts is ready to expand his Krog Street Market footprint and has chosen the new market as the official home of The Cockentrice – an homage to what Ouzts calls “New American Charcuterie.” The small, full service restaurant – think of it as a ‘Charcuterie Saloon’ he says – will seat between 50 and 60 people and will focus, not surprisingly, on just about everything you can do with a piece of meat.

“We love what is happening here at Krog Street Market especially with Kevin and Megan Ouzts,” said Paces Properties Merritt Lancaster. “They announced their Spotted Trotter expansion, featuring a larger cheese and butcher shop, with us back in July. With the recent excitement and buzz about the market, they have returned to take their business to the next level with the opening of their first full restaurant.”

Chef Ouzts is no stranger to the Atlanta restaurant scene. In 2009 when Ouzts left Restaurant Eugene to flex his culinary muscle in Napa, California, he hoped it would only be a matter of time before he could return to Atlanta and open a restaurant to call his own. Upon his return in 2010, Ouzts launched The Spotted Trotter, a USDA-certified, critically acclaimed, boutique charcuterie, producing everything from beef jerky and delicious salamis to rabbit liver pate and crepinettes. Now, with the success of The Spotted Trotter seemingly cemented by the opening of a second, larger location and accompanying cheese shop at Krog Street Market, it looks like the time for the restaurant has finally arrived.

"I couldn't think of a better venue than Krog Street Market to open up our first restaurant. The atmosphere of the entire complex is the celebration of local, and that's been front and center for us all along. I cannot wait to officially get back in the kitchen and highlight the South's bounty of amazing ingredients and meats. Charcuterie is an art form dating back more than 2500 years, and the South is just starting to dip its toe in the water. With the combination of The Spotted Trotter and The Cockentrice, I hope to cement the region's name in a genre where it has been historically underrepresented," said Ouzts.

The Cockentrice will also feature a diverse, house-cocktail list, refreshing beers and ales, and a properly picked wine list. The restaurant is slated to open Spring 2014 in a 2,752 square foot space with a patio facing Krog Street and will be connected to The Spotted Trotter's new, 800 square foot butcher and cheese shop market stalls.
